PUBLIC COMMENT

Michelle Blaas – Small increases add up and hurt the average citizen. Citing a comment made by Dr. Larry DeBoer, not using the max is like giving the property owners a permanent tax break and asked to council to reign in budget and levy increases. She presented a petition with over 400 signatures asking the council to set the monthly meeting times for 2010 to evenings to match both city councils and make it easier for the public to attend.

John Knochel – Informed the council that the County will be assessed around $20,000 for storm water fees for 2010. This will come out of a storm water fund that they have been setting aside for the past five years and will not affect the general fund budget.

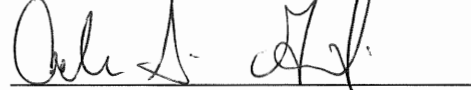

John Basham – Expressed his disagreement with the addition of the storm water fees and assessments. He feels this will greatly impact consumers as the rates are passed down; someone needs to tell the State legislature the timing is not right.

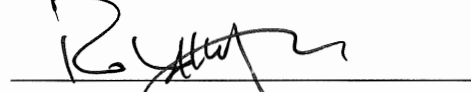

Paul Wright – Asked the council why they would choose to adopt the maximum possible tax levy. Councilmember Winger replied there are several reasons; doing so keeps the tax rate solid without a lot of year-to-year fluctuation; it prepares a foundation for future budgets; and provides the citizens of Tippecanoe County with great services with one of the more reasonable tax rates in the state. Councilmember Vernon stated this council is charged with planning for next year and future years as well. In preparing for the future we must ask ourselves what is our tolerance level for services we are willing to give up? Councilmember Kemper pointed out the county's part of the overall levy is a small portion. He explained the maximum increase takes into consideration all other taxing entities in the county and the aggregate must be within that growth quotient; if one entity requires a larger portion, all other entities would be reduced to stay within the maximum. Councilmember Winger stated in future years the citizens will very likely be asked what services they would be willing to forego in order to balance the budget and hold tax increases to a minimum.

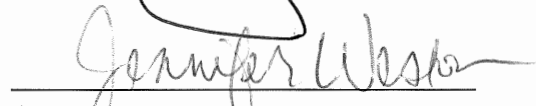

- Councilmember Kemper moved to adjourn the meeting.
